ETZIONI AND NISKANEN TO EXAMINE ECONOMIC ISSUES IN THE ELECTION CAMPAIGN

EVENT: A debate on "Economic Issues in the Election Campaign: The Role of Government and Markets in the American Political Economy."

SPEAKERS: Amitai Etzioni, George Washington University Professor and William A. Niskanen, President, CATO Institute. Henry R. Nau, associate dean of the Elliott School of International Affairs at George Washington, will moderate.

WHEN: 8 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 25

WHERE: The George Washington University
First floor, Market Square
800 21st Street, NW

BACKGROUND: To what extent should markets be allowed to develop on their own, or be directed by governments? This issue and others will be examined during "Economic Issues in the Presidential Campaign: The Role of Government and Markets in the American Political Economy." The debate will offer a serious discussion of the intellectual traditions which comprise American political life and this year's presidential campaign.

George Washington University Professor Amitai Etzioni is the author of the new book "The Moral Dimension: Toward a New Economics," (The Free Press, 1988). He currently serves as the Thomas Henry Carroll/Ford Foundation Visiting University Professor at the Harvard Business School.

A former member of the Council of Economic Advisers, William A. Niskanen is author of the recent book, "Reaganomics: An Insider's Account of the People and Policies," (Oxford University Press, 1988).

This program is sponsored by George Washington University's Elliott School of International Affairs. Media wishing to attend the event should call Charlotte Ericson in the Office of University Relations, (202) 994-6460.
